

CMIC was the first company in Japan to start a CRO (Clinical Research Organization) business in 1992, and now provides comprehensive pharmaceutical support services from development to manufacturing, sales and marketing. We also support overseas pharmaceutical, biotechnology and medical device companies entering the Japanese market, conducting clinical trials in Asia, and supporting pharmaceutical development and manufacturing in the United States and Japan. CMIC also provides new healthcare solutions to support individuals and local governments and aims to develop a business model called PHVC (“Personal Health Value Creator”) that “maximizes the health value of each individual” based on our extensive experience and track record in fully supporting the value chain of pharmaceutical companies.
